I think that it is an outrage that companies such as microsoft are able to buy their way out of legal difficulty. I think that the judicial system is setting a poor example for the already jaundiced American people when it comes to accountability and fairness in business practices. Somewhere, sometime, someone must begin to hold business to a set of ethical standards that is keeping with who we say we are as Americans. Without such accountability we will continue to see companies exhibiting the cavalier attitudes of Microsoft and Enron.
